

Making Your Bridal Shower Invitations Special

For most people who are tasked with putting together bridal shower invitations, the primary concern is the wording. You will have to consider factors such as how to inform the guests about the theme if you have one, what poems to use, and what tone to take with the invitation. These factors are important in ensuring that the bridal shower invitations will stand out for the receivers.

Some of the details that should be included in bridal shower invitations are the full name of the bride, and in some cases of the groom, the date and time of the event, the location, the RSVP name and number, and the date to RSVP by. Some other details that you may want to include in the bridal shower invitations are the date of the wedding, the name of the store the bride is registered in, and the name of the host. Showers that have a specific theme should have the bridal shower invitations worded so as to reflect this information. And if the shower is to be a surprise for the bride, the guests should be informed of the time when the bride is expected to arrive.

As for the wording of the bridal shower invitations, you will first have to consider whether you want the message to be traditional, casual, or general. This of course will depend on the type of bridal shower you will be holding, as well as the personal preferences of the bride. The general type of bridal shower invitations is by far the simplest, and can be nothing more than a message of invitation, as well as the name of the bride and the time and place of the event. A traditional message will tend to be more formal, with an appropriately worded invitation, along with the name of the bride, the date and time of the party, as well as its location. Any requirements with regard to specific attire are also typically mentioned in traditional bridal shower invitations, as is the name of the party's host.

Bridal shower invitations that take a casual approach can be a lot more informal and often includes a simple, and sometimes humorous rhyme. Of course details such as the name of the bride, as well as the date, time and location of the party should be included as well. A themed bridal shower often requires a different approach. Bridal shower invitations for these types of events should reflect the specific theme, and the invitation should be worded to include the nature of the event, as well as mention its theme. This is particularly important if you want people to wear costumes to the party.
